Chevillon, Robert

Some delicious and highly rated 2006s and 2007s. With the downturn, we have taken a major position here; the pristine vinification, superb terroirs and old vine fruit are too thrilling to ignore now or long-term. We are far from alone in regarding this domaine as the best in Nuits-St-Georges, indeed one of the best in the whole of the Côte d'Or.

"There was one producer last week whose wines really stood out for me and, since his wines are made in strictly limited quantities and some of them are already in the marketplace, I thought I would draw them to your attention... I was enchanted by his (Pierre-Yves Colin) 2008s." Jancis Robinson

This glittering range of 2008s will rank among the finest and most highly rated white Burgundies of the vintage. For those who have not experienced the wines of Colin-Morey, we cannot recommend them highly enough.

Guillemot, Pierre

Sometimes, less is more. The Guillemot family do not seek Burgundian fame and fortune, their 8 hectare range is concise, their attitude refreshing. The resultant wines are likewise. Delicious offerings, made by country folk, Côte d'Or sophistication at far from pretentious money.

Lafarge, Michel

Michel and Frédéric Lafarge run one of the most iconic domaines in the whole of Burgundy. The family and their ancestors have been making wine in the village since at least the French Revolution, most certainly earlier. There is a sense of family tradition and communal responsibility here. Year after year, they produce some of the most elegant and delicate expressions of Pinot Noir, true to their terroir. But, the wines are very much built for the long-term and can appear quite austere in their youth. Have a little patience and you'll be rewarded.

Beaujolais

Chanrion, Nicole

Nicole Chanrion produces serious Cru Beaujolais from serious terroir, old-vine Gamay Noir from the granite and schist of the Côte-de-Brouilly. This is the southernmost Grand Cru in the Beaujolais. Côte Rôtie is circa forty minutes south, and Nicole's offering shares similar Rhône-like cinnamon and spicy flavours, an artisanal character of its own, vin de terroir. This beautifully crafted wine offers stunning value.

Sang des Cailloux

The energetic Serge Férigoule (fairy ghou!) runs, in our opinion and many others, the star domaine in Vacqueyras; an underrated appellation, the wines being generally more elegant, more refined than Gigondas, less fiery than Châteauneuf. So, we were thrilled when he offered us this final 50 case parcel of his 'drinking' 2006... We adore the honesty of this wine; it's simply a steal.

St Préfert

"If you haven't discovered Saint-Prefert and the brilliant winemaker Isabel Ferrando, it's about time!" Wine Advocate

Isabel Ferrando always picks late for maximum maturity and in 2008 her white CNDP varietals very late; the 15th October for the Clairette. The wine is as confident as the lady herself, and has built a fanatical following over the last four vintages. Please contact if you are interested in Isabel's 2008 red.

Domaine Gauby is the 'First Growth' of the Roussillon, and qualitatively the wines belong at the top table alongside any of France's star-studded labels. For those unacquainted, at the very least speculate with the delectable entry-level Calcinaires, red and white.

Mas Jullien

"A wine which easily gives away its emotions" is how Olivier romantically describes his Carlan 2007. Can't possibly disagree! A wonderful single parcel of vines, a remote lieu-dit set high at c. 200-400 metres altitude, near the village of St Privat. The resultant wine (principally Grenache, then Carignan, Cinsault and Syrah) is similarly savage; fresh, explosive but very stylish, almost 'Burgundian' red fruit and a sublime velvety texture. The tannins are impressively fine and wrapped in that pure fruit, which allows this wine to be enjoyed young or cellared for up to ten years.

Tempier

Daniel Ravier's decision with the 2002 vintage to beef up the Classique, by blending with the now redundant cuvée Spéciale, was a very prudent one. The wine was first-rate previously, it is remarkable now. The 2007 is young but supple, the 2006 is one of the great Classiques, and the 2005 has that slightly rough-hewn quality but is delicious.

Corsica

Clos Lucciardi

Situated at altitude in the hills of Antisanti on Corsica's East Coast, Clos Lucciardi has been rejuvenated since 2004 by, funnily enough, Josette and Joseph Lucciardi. Their impact has been immense and immediate, this 2008 Signora Catalina receiving rave reviews in the October issue of Revue du Vin de France. Creamy aromatic white fruits on the nose, sophisticated perfume. Mineral and lively on the palate, just 12% with hint of spritz for refreshing zip.

Sparkling wine and champagne

Achard-Vincent

Domaine Achard-Vincent has been in the family for five generations, fully organic since the grandparents reign. Their Clairette de Die Tradition is a low degree wine (7%) made with Muscat and Clairette, with Demi-Sec roundness. Serve well chilled, before or after a meal, it is as invigorating and refreshing as the Alpine feel of the air here.

Claude Cazals

Today's more sophisticated drinkers, palates honed on fine Burgundy and Rhône, should be looking at Champagne with more intellectual curiosity and expect the same complexity and precision as those other regions. The charming Delphine Cazals owns this wonderful 9ha estate in Oger and Mesnil. Her aim to produce wines of typicity and terroir, which she achieves by using restrained dosages and aided by very old vines for the region.
